

Are you getting your children new tech this Christmas?

Whether it's watching videos, playing games on their devices or talking to Alexa – our children and young people are spending more time on devices and online.

Whilst the online space can be fun and educational it can also pose risks to young and impressionable people.

Ahead of Christmas when many may be buying their children new phones, devices, consoles and games it is important to protect them from online harm.

To help develop awareness around online safety aspects we have pulled together some useful links to help you on key topics:
